

"Change is a very beautiful thing that is like the moon. The moon changes over time like people. The moon has four main changes and so do people. For example: the new moon is like a baby born, that has no past and everything is new to them. The quarter moon is like a child that is shy and small but very much there. The half moon is like a teenager that thinks he is everything, he is only half grown but shows brightly that he knows a lot. The three quarter moon is like an adult, that is very mature and doesn't worry. He stands proud and shows bright. The last is a full moon that is an older person, they show brightly but very tired."—Samantha McLaren ∞ "Change is sad. Whether it's a good change or a bad change. Change is sad. When something changes all you're left with is memories."—Jodi Newton ∞ "Change can be so ugly sometimes and other times it can be so wonderful."—Tonya Thies ∞ "Change deals with space and time... But since all things must change and evolve I suppose someday the human race will not be the same as our generations."—Christa Svennson ∞ "Change the way I feel about serious relationships... Boy, I wish I wouldn't have spent so much time with the ball and chain and had more fun with my buddies."-Robb Zelinski o "I find change really hard to deal with... With out change life would be boring,"—Leah Davidson ∞ "It can be both good and bad, painful, yet fulfilling...But changes within are usually the best changes."— Leanne Fessler ∞ "Change to me is when something is not the same as usual, it is different and you are not used to it. A change doesn't have to be forever, it can be temporary."—Korrisa Whisler ∞ "Change is something everyone experiences. Whether it's sad, or something you enjoy, change is a regular part of life... Your life is like a worm changing into a butterfly."—Jordan Lewis ∞ "Change happens every day. People change in many ways... I think changes are positive, because they are good for us, to have different opinions, and views make everyone their own person and an individual."—Chrystal Penny ∞ "Change happens slowly and almost seems to creep up on me. It happens like a thief in the night, Change is like a blanket, one day covers your whole body, and the realize what troubled my parents. But now I'm older, I can by."—Gabe Gutierrez∞"Personally, Idon't like change.

Every time I get settled into a routine or a new environment, it always changes."—Jennie Langdon ∞ "Change makes life living."—Rob Matheson ∞ "In one single year my life has turned upside down. My once semicarefree adolescence is now a "stressful" senior year concentrating on graduating and practically nothing else."—Jereen Laferriere ∞ "Change is like a great bee; it may sting you, or it just might bless you with honey."—J.J. Scofield ∞ "The years of life are the seasons of time. As the seasons life in the near future."—Starlight Erdman ∞ "If there was no change there would be no life or civilization... If change suddenly stopped, people wouldn't excel."—Stacey Christensen ∞ "Life would be very dull with out change."—Janine Lewis ∞ "Change is like our winter. It changes from rain to ice and ice to a puddle."—Brian Tripp ∞ "When I moved to Seaside I made a lot of friends and had a little brother. This was good because I had a change in life."—Bryan Martin

EVOLUTION

"My life is like a small river, not too rough, yet I still have my share of obstacles to overcome."

-Moses Bullock

"The amount of time we spend together is very small, so you must grab hold of it while it lasts because it most certainly will slip away before you know it. I wish I could stop some changes or maybe just slow them down, but I can't and that is one unfair thing in life."

-Robbie Greenawald

"I suppose no matter how you think about it, change is imminent. So why is it so hard to do? I guess now that I think about it there are some changes we don't even pay that much attention to. Growing old and watching the people being born every day nudges you up another rung on the ladder that ascends until you reach eternity. That is your death. Many people keep thoughts like these pushed into the back of their minds. It always resurfaces, falls through, and comes at them and haunts them. We have a choice, either to push them back, or to accept the inevitable."

-Nathan Reed

"Change is the ocean. It can roll in and meet your toes, or it can take you by surprise and drag you out with it. Change is unavoidable; it can summon the biggest, brightest, most powerful sun. You can put on a rain coat, or surround yourself with glass, but the tides of change will still affect you. You can pretend it's washing right over, but even the air you breathe has the finest piece of salt in it. It will get you. Use it to build a castle, or use it to wash your hands. Just don't drown. If it does learn how to swim. Change can be beautiful, peaceful, or frightening, but it is always awesome in it's power. Somewhere in it's depths there are things about yourself and others you will only discover if you dive into the waves."

-Becky Olsen

"Change is like an hour glass. You start with everything and it slowly leaks away making you more and more different... Nothing can stay the same forever, but nothing is really ever lost."

- Brian Gudge

"Your place in the world will change. First you'll be the bulge everyone wants to feel, talk and sing to. Then you'll be the baby everyone goo-goo's and smiles at. You'll sleep all day in the comfort of your mother's tired arms. Next you'll be a child. You'll laugh, cry, play hop scotch, fall down, eat paste, open presents, and learn why 2+2=4. Next you'll be a teenager. You'll grow independent and move away. You'll fall in love and start a family of your own. You'll be the mother who carries her baby in her tired arm. You'll watch your baby eat paste and move away and fall in love. Your baby will bring her baby and you'll watch her hold her child softly in her tired arms. Just as you become comfortable in your spot in the world it will be time for you to move. Just remember no matter where you are your place will be an equally bright spot in the collage of life."— Emily Roley

The Oregon Trail was the longest of the great overland routes used in the westward expansion of the United states.

It wound 2000 miles (3200 kilometers) through prairies and deserts and across mountains from Independence, MO., to the Pacific Northwest. Even today travelers can see the deeply rutted roads cut by wagon wheels along sections of the trail. In 1993 this historical event was recreated.

They took a little side trip to the coast.

—Dorothy L. Millikan, retired Senior Editor, Rand McNally and Co.

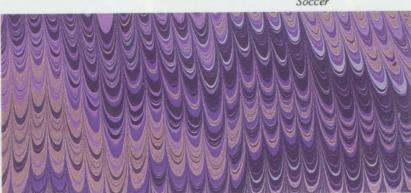

We would like to thank Dorothy L. Millikan, of Cannon Beach, who shot the cover photo of the official Oregon Trail Recreation when they arrived on the coast in November, 1993.

One rainy Saturday on November 24th, students and leaders trekked up the hill to Breakaway Lodge. The special occasion was the annual "Peer Helper Retreat." Many things, including delicious food, which was lovingly prepared by Ben Herr; the caretaker of the lodge made the trip memorable and unique for the those who attended.

At the beginning of the retreat everyone was split up into one of four family groups, which had about seven people in them. Each group composed two lists, one of problems that cause stress for highschoolers, and the other on what qualities a good peer helper has. The groups worked on brain teaser puzzles, answered serious questions about their lives, were assigned kitchen duty, and at the end of the retreat did clean-up.

Some of the groups got really close, and always went over the allotted time for meetings. During the three day, two night, emotion filled, retreat, many close friendships were formed.

On the last morning, instead of hearing the psycho alarm clock, that people had been playing with the day before, they were awakened by a new sound; music, and laughter.

During free time, they played basketball, ping-pong, cards and games. Some participants had to leave for various reasons during the retreat for a few hours, even though they wished they could've stayed. Sports and the play, would not wait for them. A few tried to complete a.jigsaw puzzle, under Steve Nipp's watchful eye.

After all the rooms, Dining Hall, Kitchen, and Meeting area were cleaned they met for one last time. Everyone composed positive scripts for everyone else. Positive scripts are notes of appreciation that is put into an envelope and read at a later time. And a special item was included in the envelopes.—Rachel Poe rors' 17 person cast soon learned that James Taylor expected perfection from everyone. Trouble with a song? Taylor made audio tapes to practice with at home. Blocking and direction? "All the action made it feel like a movie," said Flanagan. In past drama productions, the cast joked and socialized backstage until cues forced them onstage. At Little Shop rehearsals no one was ever backstage. Erin Buckmaster practiced a Bronx accent, "Trying to sound like a bimbo wasn't as easy as I thought," remarked Buckmaster. The Chorus coordinated dance steps down center, "Attitude, attitude!" Andrea Calkins yelled. While actors worked on scenes, Emily Burger and Angie Maltman stamped bricks on the sets. The pace continued until everything was done, and done right.. "I almost asphyxiated in the plant during an eleven hour rehearsal," remembered Erin Goodman.

Tim Reed scrounged sound equipment from drama groups from all over the county. "You'll sound better than ever before," said assistant Chris Gray when he handed out the cordless mikes.

During "Hell Week" three professional musicians arrived from Portland. The ensemble jammed at school until 2AM to polish their sound.

Opening night the cafeteria curtains unlocked and actors slipped into the illusion of Skid Row. The intensive preperation showed in the nearly flawless performances. Jon Broderick offered the ultimate praise. "I felt like I was watching a professional performance in Portland. Little Shop was definitely the best play I have seen at Seaside High School."—Tessie Word Happy family. "Doesn't Tessie Word have the widest mouth you've ever seen?" Taylor said after the song Mushnik and Son.

Boardin'

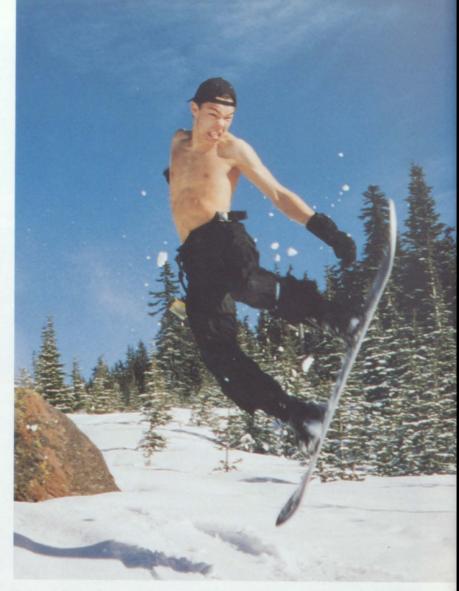

There are sports like football, soccer, basketball and such. Those sports are great for many people but for some athletes these sports seem tedious and tame when compared to the thrill of board sports. The three basic board sports are snowboarding, skateboarding, and, of course, surfing.

Take a small wooden board, attach a set of skating wheels, and maneuver it around any paved surface. Not quite that simple. Skating has advanced to the point of an endless possibility of flippy tricks. aerials, and bowl carving.

Or, bundle up real warm, strap a board to the bottom of your feet and hurl yourself down the highest mountain around?-All the while, trying to launch yourself into the air or carve sick designs into the snowy landscape.

Imagine a sport with no coach, no competition, no conditioning, riding a fiberglass board while thousands of gallons of water chase after you. Sounds fun, huh? OK, so surfers are terrific swimmers and have paddling muscles of iron. To the few who choose to take advantage of the great surf that surrounds Seaside, this is an opportunity of a lifetime. How's the surf at the cove? Indian Beach? Short Sands? Unbelievable! Graduates of SHS have been known to flunk out of college merely because they had been deprived of their regular salt water fix while attending inland colleges.

Rain, velvet, and mirrored balls sending sparkles all over the room!

t was a cold October night, the twenty-third to be exact. I remember it well. We stood in a line outside the Elks Lodge, waiting to get inside. The crowd buzzed with excitement and anticipation. The line got longer and longer, we inched closer to the door. After being scrutinized, the "door people" took our tickets and we were inside!

Music blared "WHOOMP, There It Is!" and the room buzzed with activity. A mob of people were on the dance floor and a blue, plastic pool sat in one corner full of water, goldfish and wishes. After dancing wildly for an hour I headed towards the tables to rest.

The first people to arrive at the dance were rewarded with a chair and a table to sit at. The tables glittered with candles, decorations, and mirrors. An interesting trio, but vacant tables were scarce so I crossed to some chairs lining the wall.

I sat down heavily in a chair, to give my feet a rest and surveyed the scene around me. Bodies gyrated in a sea of black velvet, someone was peddling beverages, couples were smoothing and a crazy girl danced around the crowd. Pink and white balloons scattered the room and hovered over our heads.

Excitement was still heavy in the air as the dance, and night, wound down. The lights came on and the music ended. It was a great ending to a great week; a week of sheets, spurs, roaring assemblies and Saturday Night Fever. A week of triumphant Juniors, crepe paper and football. Megan Moberg was Homecoming Queen and she told me she thought "the game was rainy, the dance was crowded, but overall it was a great week. I had a lot of fun!"

ove was in the air at the SHS Sweetheart's Dance in February. The evening sparkled under crystal chandeliers at the Ocean View Ballroom, a new dance spot for most students.

Sweetheart's couples sported a variety of styles. From black ties to black jeans, people looked snazzy. Sarah Milliron's hair shined a Manic Panic violet. Erica Johnson's usually blonde locks were a decidedly Smurfish blue.

"The most fun part was seeing everyone dressed up," agreed Marie Neilson and Erin Goodman. Carey Bruton thought so too, he started a top ten best dressed list. "A best dressed contest?" exclaimed Aimee Stewart. "So that's why Carey's been following us around all night!"

Dressing up is a plus, but what really makes a dance is the DJ and his choice of music. How did our Z100 DJ measure up? "Much better than Homecoming," said Sarah Gardner. "More people danced." The night got into gear with Technotronic, flowed into Bobby Brown and The Cranberries. and discoed up to Y.M.C.A. Kelly Tucker liked the tunes, but thought the DJ had mucho attitudo. "He tried too hard to be cool, and just didn't cut it." Tucker remarked. Mr. Z100 started up fun, impromptu competitions and found himself the loser.

During an open mike contest, Mike Watson inhaled helium and made a fool of him. "Heh, heh, you're a dork," Watson joked to applause. "That's about the only thing I remember from the dance," said Benji Allen, a few weeks later.

The most popular semi-formal of the year drew nearly half the student body, exactly 200 students. Such a big party could only please. "The best high school dance I ever went to!" remembered Leanne Fessler.—Tessie Word and Tannia Wittboldt-Mueller

I love my job! Ilove my job?

Teachers, some you like and some you don't. They can make you wish you knew where their house is, and if it is flame retardant. Or they can brighten your life by extending the deadline for a certain very important research paper. Teachers also happen to be the most ripped on people-on the plantet. Whether it's, "She gives too much homework," or "We never do anything in his class," they just can't seem to get it right.

But some teachers care about what they teach. And custodians care about whether the school looks good; kitchen workers care whether the meals are edible. And believe it or not, some care about you as a person. They're human, and all they can do is try. So here they are, the faculty and staff of SHS.-Roger Mitchell with layout by Michelle Gribble, Tammy Tagg & staff

FALL PLAY

"Every artist knows the importance of a tender lie."

Young Benbo (Michael Van Breeman) flowers into adulthood in a run down Victorian house in San Jose, California. His mother and five other tenants in a boarding house all struggle to discover their potential. The homeowner, Arlo, (Carey Bruton) is a good hearted man, confined to a wheel chair, and has the habit of telling innocent lies to help those around him feel better about themselves.

Benbo is ripe for love. When Mrs. Galarza (Tessie Word) and Isabel (Emily Burger) move into the house, Benbo's "hormones were ready." Benbo is struck by Isabel's latina looks, although Emily's dyed dark hair turned out more green than black. His mom, Sheila (Erin Buckmaster) tells her son to avoid Isabel. "She's the bitch type," warns Sheila, "and her mother's a drunk".

and her cop compadre Snootsbum (Hilary Simila) drag an inebriated and footloose Galarza home. The scene involves dancing, so the twosome studied the movie, "Lambada... the forbidden dance" in preparation, while Val wrote her own provocative lines.

At the end of the scene, Mr. Fuller (Joe Bowman) the Galarzas' cannery boss, fires Galarza and nearly Isabel, too. Isabel is humiliated. Arlo convinces her to sell her paintings to a rabbit-murdering banker, Mr. Bellon (Jordan Lewis). In reality, Arlo himself buys them. When Isabel finds out, she blows up. She disappears from their lives forever, leaves Benbo thwarted in love.

Isabel sends a delicate portrait of the house (painted by Camille Davidson) years later. The story of deceit and love concludes, and the lights fall for the final time in "San Jose, Canseco," craftily improvises Jeremiah. —Tessie Word

At first, Arlotells lies to elderly Ellie (Leah Davidson) to relieve the loneliness she feels. Ellie spends her time complaining of aches and pains. Arlo changes that. Ellie's tragic stories about falling as she "hobbled to the bathroom," become a smaller part of her life. Photo by Tessie Word.

With a little help from our friends. Sheila darkens Benbo's life with her paranoid ramblings, her overwhelming self doubt. "I hate myself!" she screeches during several scenes. Arlo sees her potential, however, and soon Sheila finds herself going on dates with attractive, employed bachelors.

On the closing Saturday night performance. Burger completely lost it! Her slap was for real. "I saw her struggling with the door. It would stick that night," confided Gilde. "I figured if she didn't get it open soon, she was going to rip the whole set down." She tore the door clean off its hinges.

"Every artist knows the beauty and the value of a tender lie," muses adult narrator, Ben (Jeremiah Secord). Seaside High School's Drama department started out the year with "Tender Lies," a play by Nancy Gilsenan. The play is memories from Ben's teenage years, when he was affectionately known as Benbo.

Don't Mean A Thing when It's Only A Paper Moon, but when parents sigh and say God Bless The Child, and girls spill coffee on their dresses minutes before their number, something must be happening-Jazz Cabaret is back.

Twenty-four members of the SHS Jazz Ensemble performed solos at the North Coast Family Fellowship. It was part of their grade and maybe some were a little nervous, but James Taylor drove them to it. Concert Choir members, served everything from cake to pie, herbal teas and coffee, juice and candy. Ken Karge served as guest host and introduced each "act" with a joke.

"I couldn't believe I did it," Nathan Reed said after his solo. "I was so relieved and people seemed to like it. They were clapping and I was so stoked, and then I looked down and my fly was unzipped." Got looked down and my Honest, no one knew.

According to Jamie Stratton, an awestruck high school jazz fan, the best part for her was watching Reed and Jené Ricketts sing their duet. This song was one of three the choir sang as a group during the finale. Jamie figured each individual showed more courage performing than she could.

With only the slightest number of glitches in the evening's program, it was an overall success.

Great job guys. And don't forget to bow! -McKenzie Reed & Staff

Michael Van Breeman was re-Go... go, Michael, go! cently caught rockin' to the oldies with band members John Ogren on piano, Dan Shulte on bass, and Wally Shaffer on drums.

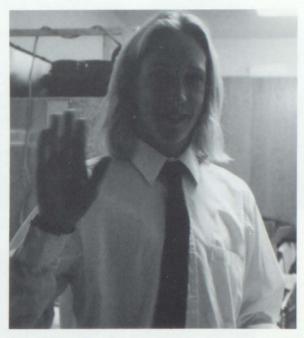

"It was hard not to watch her," Becca Shaffer's father, drummer Wally Shaffer, caught himself a few times forgetting to watch his music.

God Bless The Child... James Taylor and Angie Maltman sing a moving version of this song. "You could feel it all the way to your feet," said Michelle Gribble. Erin Buckmaster danced up and down with tears in her eyes, "Can You believe them? Isn't that incredible!"

Ohmigosh "This isn't too bad," Steve Nipp thinks as he sings "Johnny One Note" at Cabaret.

Looks fine, doesn't she? "I was so nervous I thought I was going to puke up the cheesecake I just ate," stated Val Mace.

Got the right profile? Is this my best side? Sorry Evan. We preferred the left. Evan Railton seemed popular Standin' On The Corner (Watchin' All The Girls Go By). He said he was nervous but just prayed and went on.

Can you believe we did it? I can't believe we did it. We actually sang in public. Alone. Heidi Bay and Chris Hermansen appear to be questioning their decision to perform.

gainst all odds, the SHS football team blasted to an outstanding season. The players suffered through practices without a shower room. They made do with two bright blue "outhouses" rented by the construction crew working on the high school. It was not a pretty smell.

The players pulled together Varsity, Junior Varsity, and Frosh teams to play in and out of the League. "It was a unique year. It was a very young team. We had only seven seniors on the entire team," said Head Coach Stubby Lyons. SHS seniors Gabe Guiterrez, Doug Soles, Randy Miller, Kyle Cox, Clayton Rasmussun, Jeremy Swanlund, and Ben Morris were joined by twenty-two juniors, fourteen sophomores, and twenty-one freshmen.

For the first time any of the coaches could remember, Seaside ranked in the top ten in AAA State all season. They finished with seven wins and two losses for Varsity and tied for second in the Cowapa League.

The undefeated JV team outscored their opponents 155 points to 22! Even the Freshmen Maggots, after a tough start, pulled together a record of three and two.

Fourteen SHS players were given All-League honors. Guiterrez and juniors Robbie Greenawald and Casey Jackson were given All-State honors.

"I really appreciated everyone's dedication, committment, and loyalty. For me personally, it was a great season, by a group of great athletes who came together to play," Lyons. —Jeremy Swanlund & Kyle Cox edicated, persistent, happy-golucky and close; just a few words that could be used to describe the Seaside cross country team!

"I feel this year's cross country team was a 'slice of heaven.' I appreciated the work, humor and the beauty that was on the inside, as well as the outside of all the team members!" said Head Coach. Neil Branson.

As the girls team started off they had an uphill battle! They lost three of their varsity runners and were defending a league title. Fortunately for the team, newcomers joined up. Two of the new freshman who played both soccer and cross country, helped to make the team a success. The frosh girls all knew that, come district time, Seaside would be the team others looked at to beat.

After fighting and clawing their way to the top the girls came out 6-0 for the season, and 2nd place at District. "I thought the Girls team was very strong this year. We worked well as a team, and pulled together when it counted! Throughout the season I feel the team as a whole grew closer together," exclaimed junior Heather Seeborg.

The Seaside boys had an extremely challenging, as well as slightly disappointing season! They had to face the problems of togetherness in spirit, and in the actual races. In races, the boys faced the impossible truth that they were always going to be too spread out to gain the points they needed to win as a team.

"At the beginning of the season we felt distant from each other, but by the end we worked together awaiting future challenges," explained Junior Scott Santos. After fighting these battles all season long the season started coming to an end and everyone began focusing on one thing. Districts! Although the boys had a rough season. They managed to come out united as a team! - Kris Powell.

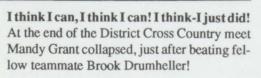

Will it ever end!? Scott Santos fights his way through the District course. Placing 44 over all!

S

No where to run, no where to hide! During the race against Tillamook and Claskanie Alicia Doyle, Brook Drumheller, Heather Seeborg and Kris Powell cross the line only hundreths of seconds apart. This was all a scheme the girls came up with, to push Drumheller! The three juniors got all around Drumheller and forced her to sprint 200 meters to the finish!

Isn't this race over yet!! Trent Grimm accidently ran the wrong way causing himself to run an extra mile!

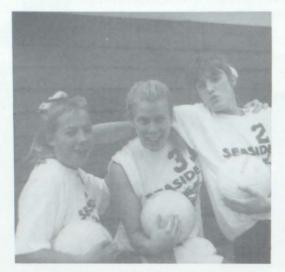

Oh my God it's hot out here! Thought Scott Crouter as he entered the final stretch on the Scappoose 5000 meter course. Crouter was the boys' best, not just in Seaside but the league! He placed first at Districts and 15 at STATE! "Although I was really upset this was my last year running Cross Country in High School. The fact that I had a very successful season helped to make leaving, a bit easier!"

Is my makeup on straight? There's nothing like finishing a Cross Country race at the end of your season! Megan Lucas was the savior of the Seaside girls team, after beating out Astoria's 6th place runner! This allowed the girls team to go on to state!

Volleyball

Three amigos! Younger and less experienced players looked to the three seniors on Varsity, Jill Remensnyder, Melisa White, and Tracy Bassett for leadership on and off the court.

Mahoo! Michelle Hawken was just told she has a big "dictionary".

ree Willie!" echoed through school hallways and was heard from the volleyball court and even from passing cars, especially Melisa White's "Beast". The shout was a mystery to some, but a war cry for some SHS volleyball players.

The season was filled with ups and downs. JV Team Captain Tauna Dean, and players Brandi McDonald and Jenny Main took time off from their game to play Powder Puff Football, but it was just another one of the downs.

Varsity was also effected by the sickness of one of their front row starters, Jody Meyer. A three game overtime loss to Astoria at mid season was a disappointment.

On the other hand, sometimes the team didn't stop at McDonalds after games and Assistant Varsity Coach Jason Boyd was a posative influence.

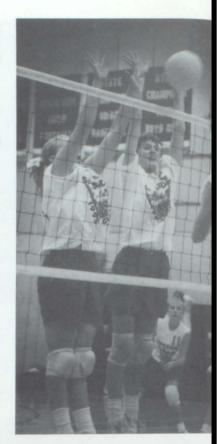

Tthe League win over St. Helens at home in September was a highlight. Jill Remensnyder made All-League, while Melisa White earned a place on the League's second team.

t's unanimous! The 1993 season was the best yet. The year's team surprised many people by showing skill and ability. P.K. Deveraux had this to say about the year, "This is the best team we've had so far, we have more of a togetherness than in past years."

A goal for this year's team was to finish the season without a red or yellow card, a goal which they successfully accomplished. Cards are issued by referees for serious fouls. A red card will result in expulsion from the game. By holding back and keeping their tempers, they saved themselves more than a few goals and won an important game against O.E.S. with a couple of penalty kicks.

More fans turned out than ever to watch SHS play some of the hardest teams in the league. Sometimes it seemed only the fans kept the players going. One thing that only partly shows the teams hard work and effort is the scorebox.

Coach Jon Broderick was congratulated by opposing coaches for his team's attitude and control of the ball. "We've got lots of skill this year and good attitudes, we've managed to beat some pretty tough teams," said Micah Simila. Having a good attitude is only half of it though, it also takes skill to win. something that our team has plenty of.

Matt Elek summed up the team the best when he said, "I love soccer, we all love soccer, probably because it takes so much talent, we never have enough, but we're getting there, and enjoying every second of it." -Barney Grant

"In the winter there's bone chilling cold, bare trees bitten by the frigid cold, snowmen, children frolicking, making snowmen, snow angels, trees delicately powdered with snow, like dust on an oak table. overcast gloomy skies, ominous night full of crisp air stinging your nostrils, life appears every so often, everything else is hiding from the intense cold of winter. Winter brings Santa Claus, and families together, winter vacation, school's out, a break from the hustle and bustle of life. Life seems to be in a temporary stand-still, all life put on pause. The pause button runs out and spring sheds its life upon the clean slate of the soul." -Chloe Kisvardy t was the most unforgettable thing of the year!" said Michael Van Breeman of the winter talent show. Singing "God Rest You," Van Breeman won the biggest prize of fifty dollars. Whether it was being touched by the many singing performances, grooving to one of the group instrumentals, or singing along with the Spanish and French classes, the talent show was a must-see for anyone who enjoys music.

"School talent shows are really important to showcase the abilities of our student and teachers," commented teacher Chris Gilde. With his partner in crime, French teacher Jon Broderick, Gilde definitely showed his talents (and pleased the crowd) with a blues jam. The two won second place for forty dollars, which Broderick put towards his French II classes.

Senior Matt Flanagan sang two duets, with Jené Ricketts and Shelly Ragan, and received 30 dollars for the singing of "I'll Be There" with Ricketts.

Of the whole show, Matt had to say, "Even though I won money off of it, I don't think it should have been judged. Judging things like this only makes people egotistical about their talents."

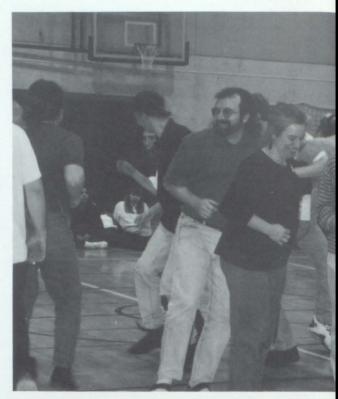

"I thought it was really fun," said Marie Neilson, who sang a song, but didn't win a prize. She, too, disagreed with the judging process. "I think the judging should have been handled differently."

Although some of the performers didn't have the greatest of times, the crowd had a blast. Senior Mark Fogarty exclaimed, "I liked it very much, and it stimulated the intellect of my brain." Senior Ben Skolnick, who helped judge the show, had something to say about it. "I thought it was rigged."

Whether you did or didn't like who won, the winter talent show was well worth seeing.

A month later, an assembly was held to honor the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr. It was, at the least, one of the most controversial Seaside High School has ever seen. The performances started out with small skits performed by members of the student body.

Included in the short plays were incredibly courageous performances by members of the student body dealing with issues like sexism, racism, and sexual preferences.

The next step in the assembly was two speeches by freshman Camille Davidson and Anne Hockersmith. The first, by Hockersmith, described her personal experiences with sexism in a middle school shop class. Second, Davidson explained her encounters with racism when she moved to Cannon Beach from a larger integrated grade school.

Wrapping up the day was a short presentation on the life of Martin Luther King, Jr. by student body officers.

To sit and listen to what everybody had to say and watch students portray roles Seaside High has never openly seen really made one think. That day was probably the most memorable Seaside High School experienced all year.

In March, Seaside High School had theirfirst ever Multi-cultural day. It included an extended lunch where students sold food from countries around the world and an assembly that taught and involved students in Native American dances and ways of life.

The reason behind the Multi-Cultural day was to give students a chance to experience cultures they are not exposed to on a regular basis.

"Ibelieve exposure, education, and communication between different cultures, religious and ethnic groups, sexes, and social groups leads to understanding and tolerance of our differences." said Emily Roley.

The assembly featured the Chemawa Dance Group from Salemand the Young Spirit drumming and singing group.

After the presentation students formed small groups and discussed why diversity is important and how we can encourage it in our school. — Pat Mochel, some material was provided by Emily Roley.

Stand tall, don't move, the itch'll probably pass. This might be what some of these guys are thinking as they sing out "Chimney Sweeper" and "The Piper" to the crowd's content. "Christmas Finale" and "Three Carols For Christmas" were performed with Symphonic Band accompaniment.

he annual Winter Concert arrived without a hitch. Community members and students filled the Convention Center in Seaside. Through rain and hail and snow and sleet, which of course we had none of, they came. In years past the concert has been postponed for weather. Pushing it back until after the Holiday Break is not uncommon for this performance. But we played before Break and took our chances on December 21st.

We had everything from Girls Concert Choir to Jazz and Symphonic Bands in their new, and finally matching, outfits. Senior Brian Smith, a clarinet player in the symphonic band, happened to see the concert on T.V. after the event, "We looked really professional with our new outfits."

Junior Rob Greenawald agreed and said he thought, "We played well and with intensity." Scott Crouter has been sick for every winter production during his high school career, but finally made this one. Audrey Mitchell, a sophomore choir member, remarked, "It was quite a step up from our previous performances."

Jennie Langdon, a junior Acapella Choir member, felt they performed a lot better than during earlier practices. A question often asked of the performers is about nervousness. The newer performers may feel a bit more of this pressure than their seasoned elders. A.J. Parsons is one of the veterans. She has been performing since the third grade. Her parents thought drums would be too loud and obnoxious, but were unprepared for the high notes on the clarinet. She's rarely nervous and enjoys playing in Band and singing in Concert Choir. "I like [performing] it. To be able to look out on the crowd and go for it." —McKenzie Reed 34, you just ain't gonna' stop him! All-State post Tim Campbell in a game against third place Tillamook. He led the Cowapa League in scoring and the Seagulls to State.

he 1993-94 Seaside Basketball team knew they would be good with six returning lettermen and second team All State returnee, Tim Campbell. They set several goals, the major one being to go to the State Tournament as they had a year ago. They accomplished this while enjoying a great deal of regular season success, 16-6 and finishing second to Astoria in League.

It was the Tillamook game that got them into the State Tournament. Seaside was expected to win comfortably, but Tillamook hung on and at the end, with three minutes to play, Seaside was down. Last minute heroics by the starters provided the Gulls with a berth at State.

Half the school turned out in Eugene for State. While the team was unaccustomed to the man defense utilized by the majority of the teams there, and disappointed at their losses, players had fun at the Tournament.

Post Tim Campbell was MVP of the Cowapa League and First Team All State. Campbell shared All League honors with Forward Byren Thompson and Guard Travis Medema. Point Guard Ben Morris made Honorable Mention. Varsity Coach Larry Elliot considered it a good season saying, "It was the best shooting team I ever coached." He was also pleased with the way the team worked together to accomplish their goals.

The JV squad finished out the year with thirteen wins and eight losses. Bruce Buzzel also commented on the season, "Frustratingly enjoyable... It was a learning year that I was relatively pleased with." There were some spectacular individual performances, highlighted by Ben Archibald's seventeen defensive rebounds in the game against Ilwaco and Peter Hill's eight blocked shots against Willapa Valley.

The Freshmen were put under the command of Jason Boyd. Mike Little led the team in scoring at eleven points a game and the team won ten games. Boyd said, "Freshman basketball was both exciting and challenging. Looking back, I'm going to miss this group." — Pat Clyde & Roger Mitchell irls Basketball team confronted many challenges when only four teen players showed up, for varsity and junior varsity. Each game, three to five players would have an opportunity to play junior varsity as well as varsity. Although the team was young and scarce, it wasn't about to be beaten down.

Afreshman made the Varsity team as point guard. The aggressive player blew everyone away with her skill and ability. Although she often swept floors, freshmen Rachael Morris claims it was all worth it to be on varsity. At first, the team was unsure of a freshman's ability to play varsity basketball. After a full season, she proved to all the team members she could play ball!

All through the season the team had its ups and downs—some of the ups being home games. "We hardly ever lost at home," recalled Coach Hawes, "but at away games we'd fall apart! Teams we should have crushed on the road would beat us by two points, until we got them to our courts!"

It's every coach's dream to have ten fresh girls for just varsity and junior varsity but this year that was impossible. It was common with injuries and colds to have to cancel out of junior varsity games! "I think, although I hated to swing, that perhaps the swing will help us in the future. A lot of girls got some extraordinary playing time in!" exclaimed Coach Hawes.

"It wasn't fun having to go from one game to another, because if you didn't play well in the first game you'd usually have bad feelings going into the second. I had to learn to set aside the junior varsity game, because the varsity game was new and I could do new things," explained Michelle Hawken, one of the girls the swing affected.

Other highlights of the '94 season were Melisa White and Jenni Neuman, the only two seniors on the team. Neuman and White brought a lot of leadership to the team.

Shooting for the stars! Freshman Rachael Morris shocked everyone with her amazing playing skills, when she started as varsity point guard! It's not often a freshman gets on the team. "I was scared at first I always wanted to play varsity and I knew if I tried hard enough I'd get the chance to play!" exclaimed Morris. Not only did Morris get the chance to play varsity, but she also received Honorable Mention from the Cowapa League! Photo by Gen Dennis.

Water always in the ears, red rings around your eyes from goggles, loud noises that mean "go," fear of heights, fear of jumping into the water and meeting your teammates' feet! These are just of a few of the obstacles swimmers have to over come.

"Swimming's different from all the other sports I've been in. It's really competitive!" exclaimed Mark Smith. And indeed, swimming is very competitive. This sport, like many, is mentally tough. If you're just not with it, you'll feel the effects. Steve Nipp, "You have to be a mental stud!"

After an astonishing second place at the League meet, the girls team went on to take fourth out of eighteen, at Districts (for swimming, this includes about a quarter of Oregon). The guys having placed fourth at the League meet, placed seventh at the District meet.

It's difficult to get to State in swimming. Only the first place person in each event is allowed to go! And placing at State is even more difficult considering there is only a 4A state meet and no 3A meet.

Although the odds were against Junior Tonya Thies going to State in the 100 backstroke, and Sophomore Lori Visser going in the 500 freestyle, they still managed to come out. Both Tonya and Lori placed eighteenth!

"This was my second year going to State, so I knew what I was getting myself into. All I wanted was to lower my time, and I did! Two seconds! For my senior year I would like to be State Champion, and as long as I keep my goal in sight, I think I can do it. It takes a lot of work, but I'll put out the effort," remarked Thies.

Swimming has a remarkably short season. From day one swimmers have to be ready to "work!" Workouts can be as long as 3000-4000 meters. With limited access to the pool, swimmers have to be able to "sweat it" in an hour.

But when all is said and done, the season's over; the water out of the ears and the rings around the eyes are gone. Swimmers get the opportunity to put their skills to work for them—every time they enter water!—Kris Powell

Wrestling since the 7th grade, his '93/94 record was 23-5—not bad for someone who was out with a twisted ankle for two weeks. The Slacker will miss being in great shape, the competition, and beating the hell out of Nate Burke!

"All men must descend into the heart of darkness, confront their greatest fears and learn the truth of their own experience or be broken," quotes Nate Burke. "It's always been my long term goal to place first at Districts. Now I just want to place at State!"

"State was awesome. I didn't do too good, but just getting there was a task in itself," recollects Clayton "Big Bear"
Rasmussen shown here pinning a HWT from Scappoose. In Big Bear's mind, "State was the best vacation he'd ever had!"

The Cowapa League District is one of the toughest wrestling Districts in the State. This season nine Seaside wrestlers earned placement at the District tournament. They include Tom Rawls (98 pounds), Brian Cleys (106 pounds), Ethan Osburn (123 pounds), and Matt Brien (141 pounds) who all earned a sixth place, and Ben Clark (130 pounds) placing fourth. Other place winners were of Seniors Caleb Fackerell (178 pounds), Jeremy Swanlund (191 pounds) and Clayton Rasmussen (HWT) all with second place honors. Junior Nate Burke (168 pounds) achieved first place at the District meet.

Only a proud few have ventured to the State Tourney, since the team of 1980. Finally, Seaside buried the past. Nate Burke, Caleb Fackerell, Jeremy Swanlund, and Clayton Rasmussen, the four commonly referred to as the Seaside wrecking crew, all took a little trip to the state tournament in Coos Bay. Caleb Fackerell, voted as the most valuable Seaside wrestler, became the first State placer since 1980, by achieving a fourth place in his weight class.

"State was a blast! I've always wanted to go because my coach had never had anyone place at state for him. So he felt like there was something wrong with his coaching. I was really proud to be able to place for him," explained Caleb Fackerell.

"All in all the season went by far too fast," said Coach Mattocks about the season. "But time flies when your having fun!" -Kris Powell & Jeremy Swanlund.

Oh great! Now what do I do? In wrestling you can end up in some interesting situations, as shown here while Senior Ben Clark wrestles against a wrestler from Clatskanie. Clark has wrestled for five years, and placed fourth at districts. "This season was my best season out of my five years, and it was going really good until districts when I lost my chance at going to state," explains Clark. "Wrestling is definitely a one on one sport, if you do great or lose you can't blame anyone else. It's all between you and your opponent!" Photo by Joe Gilmore.

...the sound of music

It all began on a cool evening in May. People rushing about changing into uniforms, doing hair, blowing up balloons, and tuning voices. Some also wondered if their music would ever arrive. Not to mention their stand partner.

In all it was an eventful evening. Musicians played or sang a variety of styles and songs. Everything from "Ave Maria" and "Happy Together" to "Jurassic Park" and some of John Williams' themes. Awards were given out for outstanding band and choir members in each class. At one point, Band president and vice Sara Toninato and Rachel Boles, gave a rose to each senior and those who helped pull things together over the year. Behind Rachel's back Sara bought her a flower. In the end, Rachel had done the same for Sara.

Before this concert, the Acappela choir had the opportunity to attend the State competition. The choir also had a chance to compete in the University of Portland's "Best in the Northwest." They placed third after Catlin Gable and Dallas.

Other Schools want to perform at SHS because, "Hey, it's the beach." Taylor says, "We're going to have other schools calling us to sing, not to visit the beach."

Hey Ben what are youlooking at? Sonja Aursland and Ben Morris wait for the balloons to come down. Photos by Jan Priddy except as noted.

Prom bloomed early this year! Balloons floated above our heads, candles flickered in glowy center pieces, and the scent of flowers graced the room. At 8:00 P.M., couples strolled into the third floor ballroom of the Ocean View Motel. Short, long, tight, loose, poofy, lacey; the dresses came in all shapes, colors, and sizes. For guys, a rental tuxes was a must.

"I liked wearing a tux. Actually, I think I looked quite stylin'," remarked Jason Cushman on his formal wear experience". "The balloons had very good helium, I liked the little pencils on the table, the drinks were expensive, and I thought the DJ danced pretty well," commented Rebecca Bulleri.

Girls started right off on the dance floor. But the boogie team of Bi Liu and Jeremiah Secord made couple dancing look fun; soon more guys migrated from the tables to join their dates.

The turn-out was impressive. Over one hundred juniors and seniors and their dates came to the ultimate social event.

"Sleepless in Seattle" played on a giant screen early in the evening. Eventually the movie was replaced by music videos featuring Kurt Cobain, Snoop Doggy Dog, and Beck.

The Prom Court starred Queen Sonja Aursland and King Ben Morris, Tracy Bassett andJeremy Swanlund, Megan Moberg and Gabe Gutierrez, Shannon Rockwell and P. K. Devereaux. Emily Burger crowned the princes with top hats while the princesses sparkled in tiaras.

"Prom was a great ending to an o.k. year," Doug Soles said. "Prom was great, and my date Roger Mitchell was hot!" commented Star Erdman. "Dancing was fun but I had a great time just walking around talking with my friends," said Matt Brown.

That was Prom! Maybe not everyone danced or got drinks, but everyone had fun.—Nicki Rowland, Tessie Word, & Staff

"They spend all this money on tickets and clothes and dinner and then all the girls get up and dance and all the senior guys sit together in a circle and look out at the dance floor. Some couples never talked to each other."

The DAZE and Nites of DOERNBECHER

There's a saying, "People who care are people who share." If that's the case, Seaside High School gained a top position on the caring list through the performance of staff and students at the April 18th kick off for the annual Doernbecher Days.

For two weeks, SHS bustled with activities. Daily cake walks, barbecues, a car wash, basketball and golf tournaments, a coffee house, an auction, and a dance were the majority of the activities offered during Doernbecher Days.

"The best thing was the fifty-cent slice of pizza," exclaimed Junior Evan Railton speaking of the refreshments served during the dance.

The ever popular Doernbecher Night was full of ups and downs. Teachers and students paid for a shot at willing victims hanging above the dunk tank. Hiedi Lent earned $50 in a half hour spent partially under water! Freshman Randy Gray won ice cream eating contest and scampered off to celebrate.

Then, the highlight—boxing! A ring provided by Nickel Ads was where the fighters stood their ground. Girls and guys alike participated in this event. Matches paired up students such as Makaila McGraw and Shanie Baker to Ed Tomlin and Jason Kraushaar. "If the ref hadn't called the match, I would have rocked him." commented Tomlin.

Probably one of the most intense fights of the night was displayed by SHS Junior Nate Burke v. Mike Morgan , of Warrenton. "I liked getting hit as much as hitting him," commented Burke.

Another popular festivity was the first annual Mr. Seaside High Pageant. Eleven men participated in this event, ranging from a courageous freshman to our lovable custodian, Warren Whipple. "I liked the swimsuit competition, because I won." Whipple went home with second place under his belt, to champion, Pat Capper.

"It feels good to be something other than Mr. Universe for a change," Capper said jokingly. "But seriously, I feel good that so many people came." The turn-out was impressive as students cheered on their favorites.

"In a sense, I was happy for him because he's my friend, but, I was also devastated. Extremely devastated." said Scott Reilly after Capper ousted him in the third round.

"Ditto," added Senior Wyatt Tuttle, also beaten out by Capper.

Wrapping up the Doernbecher weeks was Casino Night, held for the adult members of the community. It was a night of wheeling and dealing with Black Jack, Wheel of Fortune, 4-5-6, and some raffles making up the closing activities for Doernbecher Week.—Pat Mochel and Michelle Gribble pring is a beautiful time. The fresh breeze blowing through the air, the daisies coming back to life after the long hard winter, and the cool rain catching the brilliant light of the sun. It seems like nothing can ruin it. Of course, there is a way. Just try playing golf. No matter how good things seem, the joys of being a beginning golfer can always destroy a perfect situation.

"It feels good to be something other than Mr. Universe," proclaimed sophomore Pat Capper after his tremendous victory in the Mr. Seaside pageant.

In an insane attempt to cover the athletic part of the three A's, I decided to go out for golf.

The first time I played golf was with my uncle over Christmas break. It seemed like an easy enough game. Of course being a beginner to the game, I didn't realize that occasionally he forgets to play by the rules. My first day out for the team, it finally occurred to me that things like mulligan and improving your lie anytime weren't actually legal. My first shot flew a good 150 yards. Unfortunately, all 150 of them were to the right.

"That's a mulligan," I explained. setting up another ball.

The rules of golf apparently say that my shot was out of bounds, and I therefore get a two stroke penalty. I say, "Who needs the rules, I'll make up my own". The guys I played with didn't appear to share my philosophy...

In trying to find some sort of consolation from my golfing woes I thought, "At least I'm getting some exercise." But then it occurred to me, walking five feet at a time isn't going to get my cardiovascular stuff working very well.

Though it took a while, I recently got the chance to play in a meet. Vaugn, wanting to give everyone a chance to play in one meet, started with the worst golfer and counted up to decide the JV players for Ilwaco. Imagine my surprise when I was the first one chosen.

As it turned out, Ilwaco only brought six guys, and I had to play someone from my own team. As I teed off on the first hole, my ball sailed an amazing twenty yards forward.

"At least it went straight," I said, "You see, that's my strategy. If you hit it too hard, it's less likely to go straight. But if you don't hit it as far, you can keep it on the fairway."

"Yeah, but usually you try to hit it a little farther than twenty yards," added someone from the distance.

Despite all my golfing woes, I know I've made some improvement, and someday, maybe I'll actually qualify. But until then, I still have the consolation of being outside in the beautiful spring weather.—Kirk Reynolds, the Larus

Both Girls and Boys Varsity Golf had up and down seasons. There were flashes of promise shown by individuals and teams through out the year.

Girls had a successful season in League by placing first all but two times and making it to State. At State they faltered a little and ended up in seventh place.

The boys team was fairly young consisting of only two returning varsity players, P.K. Devereaux and Matt Brown. Devereaux had an impressive season and Brown ended his season at State after placing fourth at Districts.—Pat Clyde hallenges come in many forms.

One of the biggest and most important qualities in a team sport is personalities. If a team works well together, it doesn't matter if the talent is low, the team can excel. Unfortunately, it doesn't work the other way around. That's where team centered sports become challenging. It's not always easy to get along with your teammates.

Each time a season starts, there are high expectations and coach speeches of crushing other teams and sending them home to play softball with their mommies. Yet, even for strongly talented teams such as Seaside, you have to have a year to "rebuild!"

Despite only two League wins, the players managed to come out of their season with their heads held high. "I feel we have a lot of talent that hasn't been expressed yet. Things have to change on our part to win, the team needs to work together more," frowned Chris Garasic. "The junior varsity team has some pretty good kids. We'll be stacked up for the next couple years!"

Although the team scores weren't what everyone expected, that didn't stop some of the players from achieving Honorable Mention from the Cowapa League. Honorable Mention achievers were senior Ben Morris playing the position of short stop, junior Casey Perkins third base, and junior Sam Childress for out field.

The '93-'94 junior varsity squad won nineteen of their twenty-eight games! "There was a lot of raw talent with the junior varsity squad this season! If they'd clean up their attitudes, the team would be very strong," exclaimed Stubby Lyons, coach of the junior varsity baseball team. "Two or three of the junior varsity players could've played varsity."

Although the scores were down, both team's efforts were high. Everyone gave what they could for the betterment of the team! As said by Coach Lyons, "Playing is good, winning is better. You can win games with individuals, but it takes teamwork to win championships!"—Kris Powell rack isn't a team sport, or is it? Track & Tack isn't a team sport, or is it?

Although track & field tends to be looked upon as an individual sport. It takes team cooperation to win meets. Why, your probably wondering? Simple. It takes every athlete performing at peek takes every athlete performing at peek effort for a team to win a meet. "Were not like Basketball and Football. We have a set number of events and we look for our strengths and develop the athletes we have into the events." commented Coach Gilbertson.

> Districts was held at the SHS track for the season of '94, and although six coaches in the league believed Seaside couldn't pull off an efficient and well-run track meet, the SHS track & field athletes all knew it could be done. After all, Seaside runs some of the smoothest meets, why couldn't we run a smooth District meet? It took a total of fifty-eight adults, not all from Seaside, and twenty-eight students to help pull off the two day District meet.

> After the last day of Districts, five of the six coaches who had doubted Seaside's ability approached Seaside's coaches and congratulated them on running off one of the smoothest meets the Cowapa League has ever had. Head Coach Gene Gilbertson credits all who helped at the meet, as the reason SHS had such a successful meet. Said one of the coaches. "Seaside can hold the District meet anytime!"

> The SHS track & field men had a seasons to be remembered as they swept the League with their awesome athletic powers. This year the boys team sent nine boys to the State meet: juniors Jake Brown in the 100, 200, 4 by 100 and 4 by 400 relays, Mark Smith 800, Jason Bartlett 4 by 400 and 400, and Andy Weaver in the pole vault; seniors Doug Soles in the 4 by 400 and 4 by 100, Tim Campbell long jump and 4 by 100; sophomores Scott Reilly in the 4 by 100 and alternate for the 4 by 400, Peter Hill 4 by 400 and 400, and Ben Archibald in the shot put.

These girls went through a lot! But of course you would have to, team work is important in this game. "We had great attitudes, worked really well together, and had fun!" commented coach Wally Hamer. Indeed they did have fun. Each lunch period they would gather and eat together, they had bowling parties, and constructed a new "softball vocabulary," thanks to senior Jill Remensnyder. "Superfly" means something known only to teammembers. What team unity!

Varsity had a total of ten members, but as Hamer pointed out, "Small numbers can be positive because kids get a lot of playing time in."

"For me the best part of our team was Coach Wally Hamer," said junior Melissa Harding. "Hamer has been the best coach I've ever had. He made me laugh, but he always kept us in focus."

The season ended with the sad news that this would be Hamer's last season coaching softball.

JV had what might be called an "interesting season." Sarah Arndt tripped over her own bunt. Amber got hit in the head by a wild pitch.

The first JV game against Astoria was on their turf and the Gulls were down by one. However, on the return engagement, Astoria got cobbered, with the Gulls winning by eleven points. Irma Merro proved herself invaluable by pitching, catching, and playing nearly any position required. or years upon years high school students have groveled their way about the community. Donations for activities, donations for charities, buy an advertisement for our annual, buy something at our fund-raiser. Give us and help us have been phrases our community has grown accustomed to. A lot of taking and receiving, but very little has been done to give back to this seemingly bottomless pot of gold.

Finally, students are challenged to give back to the community around them. As if the challenge to do the right thing wasn't enough, it is also a requirement for graduation. The service project is called the Pacifica Project and it has three major stages. First the student must do a research paper on their proposed area of service, then the actual recommended 50 hours of service to the area, and finally a presentation to be performed in front of community leaders.

Every senior was given an hour and a half, every other day to work on their project. Every project was unique which ranged from golf tournaments for charity, and blood drives, to volunteering for the local hospice, and eco-tourism campaigns. The projects were picked by many to give back to a certain aspect of our community that had given to them. But of coarse every requirement set forth by the administration is met with adversity from us, the students. Many of us were drug kicking and screaming through the whole process, right up to the end. But in the end most realized the true significance of our ordeal, the merit in the whole idea, the silver lining, if you will.

On that final day in May, when we gathered at the Convention Center to present ourselves, and our projects to the community, many were nervous. We wondered how we would fare in the eyes of the people we asked so much of. Those people were awestruck by the sheer volume, and quality of the services performed. After all the trials and tribulations Mike Hawes, the father of the Pacifica Project, was finally vindicated of all the horrible accusations of forced labor, and servitude as we realized how important giving back truly is.

School's out for summer! School's out for ever! The official 1994 class motto. One-hundred and three Seniors graduated on June sixth 1994. It's strange to think that you can go to school with someone for ten years, and then never see them again. Good luck. Live life to the fullest, and the happiest. Never go back to high school again.

REVOLUTION ______ Graduation 99

Good evening. On behalf of Seaside High School's class of 1994, I welcome you to our ceremonies.

During the past thirteen years, the school system of America has been preparing us for this very night, where every assignment, project, and test we've done is recognized with a high school diploma. To me, this process has been so quick. Grade school blended into middle school and middle school blended into high school, which has brought us right here...

-Tim Campbell

Many would parallel success with grades in school. It, however, would say grades showonly a dedication to learning through one system. If the current system does not fit your style, please do not give up on learning.

We may continually expand out horizons. Travel, read, meet new people, try new things, never give up, always remember there are resources there to help, welcome change, and don't burn any bridges.

We should look upon the toture at all times with new dreams, and we shouldn't trouble ourselves, with regrets. We should treasure our memories shared with the many generations we work with. Within our lifetime we, and millions of others in our generation hold within us all that is important from the past, and in our hands we hold the hope of all that is to come. We can choose to destroy or to preserve the future. I urge us to think beyond ourselves, and to consider what effect our choices will have upon the generations of tomorrow.

—Starlight Erdman, Co-Valedictorian

...I have always been afraid of speaking in front of large crowds, but here I am. When preparing this speech I remembered a quote by Muhammad Ali. He said, "It's a lack of faith that makes people afraid of meeting challenges, and I believe in myself."

Tenight the class of 1994 is going to meet a challenge of its own. We are starting our journey towards independence. All through high school we have had our families and friends to rely on, we have all been sheltered in some way. Now we must start relying more on ourselves...

I know I speak for all when I say that this has not been easy.

Through the course of this year, we have made many important decisions that will affect us for the rest of our lives. The most important, of course, is deciding what to do after graduation. Many have already made that decision. Some are continuing their education through college, some are continuing theirs through work, and still some are continuing their quest for knowledge through traveling.

As we head into the future, make decisions that will-make a difference in your life. Decide what you want in life and go for it. Because as we all know dreams can come true if we decide we want it had enough.

And I would aspecially like to thank my parents. Morr, Dad, thank you for all you have done for me. Thank you for all your support and love. For I know I would not be here today if it were not for the two of you?

Elizabeth Bi Liu, Co-Valedicto

High school. When I reflect on the time we've spent together, don't recall the sleepless nights of homework or the made for T.V. movies we watched in Family Living Ironically, none of the school work comes to mind, but the times spent crammed into the bleachers during football games and striking up conversation with a neighbor while crouched under a desk during earthquake drills.

What's been etched upon my mind is my class, the seniors, and what we've been through.

Well, it's over. We lived through Pacifica Projects and with it the days of aimlessly wandering the hall. English Portfolios... anything to do with Mr. Priddy... it's finished. I'm happy to say that includes the new tardy policy and having an alibi on hand whenever you were caught in the halls without a significant purpose.

Polike to thank the faculty for the impact you've made, on my education. What you've taught me had not gone to waste. Mr. Broderick, thank you for all the time you've given me during class to do every kind of project other than French. Mr. Comigan I'll have you know that what you taught me in National Government about the rights of citizens was instantly recalled the first time I got pulled over, we'll have to talk about that later, Mom.

Jill Remensnyder

closing words for the class of 1994. This time last year I was sitting in the audience, gazing up onto the stage with envy, wondering if my time would ever come. Now, I am standing up here on stage gazing into the audience, wondering "Where did the time go?"

want every parent, teacher and community member here tonight to understand that for the last four years we have truly worked for this accomplishment... we tried so hard to successfully balance school requirements and life in the real world, because tonight we are not entering the real world as even I may think, for that is where we have been. This class has struggled as does every one with financial problems, unemployment, family breakups and disasters. And I want you to know that through these struggles and because of these struggles we have commit ted ourselves to more. We have committed ourselves to education. -Brooke Roberts, ASB President

"We are today where our thoughts have brought us; we will be tomorrow where our thoughts take us."

You've made McDonald's more than just a another place to eat. And that's why, at McDonald's, we say...

Thank goodness it's over! No one ever said remodeling was fun. SHS survived over a year of reconstruction as crews gutted, demodeled, built, and "winged it!" The main hall of SHS the day before teachers came back to the building in September 1993. The new Publications rooms will be available for the 1995 SEABREEZE staff.

Thank You! We couldn't have done it alone, not even with our SEABREEZE staff of twenty-five. Thanks are due to Doug Dougherty for loaning us his laser printer while ours was indisposed, Chloe Kisvardy for her "winter copy," the Seaside Signal for sharing photos with us, to Eric Kranzush and other staff members of The LARUS for their generous assitance, and to the staff of SHS.

Yes, we were having fun, yet! The staff of the SEABREEZE regrets if your picture is missing from this book. The LARUS staff is missing and we feel particularly sad about not exposing our partners in crime. Yearbook staff members finally take a team picture. Back row: Pat Clyde, Barney Grant, Elle Mckay, Ian Hubik, Evie Alburas, Rebecca Bulleri, Rachel Poe, Liz Byes, Nicki Rowland, Jenny Santos. Front Row: non-staffer Jeremy Capper (sitting in for Roger Mitchell), Pat Hubik, Jeremy Swanlund, Gen Dennis, Tannja Wittboldt-Müller, Tessie Word, Pat Mochel, Michelle Gribble, McKenzie Reed, and Tammy Tagg. Missing are Kris Powell, Roger Mitchell, and Jan Priddy. Photo by Neil Priddy.

ast year at this time, the yearbook crew, which included a number of us here today, was struggling to finish the book. We suppose that's one of the things that stays the same, year after year. It's against the rules (the yearbook rules) to mention past or future years, but breaking the rules is one of the things that changed this year. Most things change. And change is one of the things this particular yearbook is about.

Michelle is new [she made me write that]. The schedule was different this year. We had eight periods instead of seven and they met four periods a day, on an "A" day/"B" day rotation. Yearbook met on "B" days, eighth period for about an hour and a half two or three times a week. Trimesters turned into semesters. In the spring we began starting shoool late to allow staff to work on even more changes.

We had a new/old principal, Carl Odin, who was a counselor here several years ago and came back to his old/new stomping grounds.

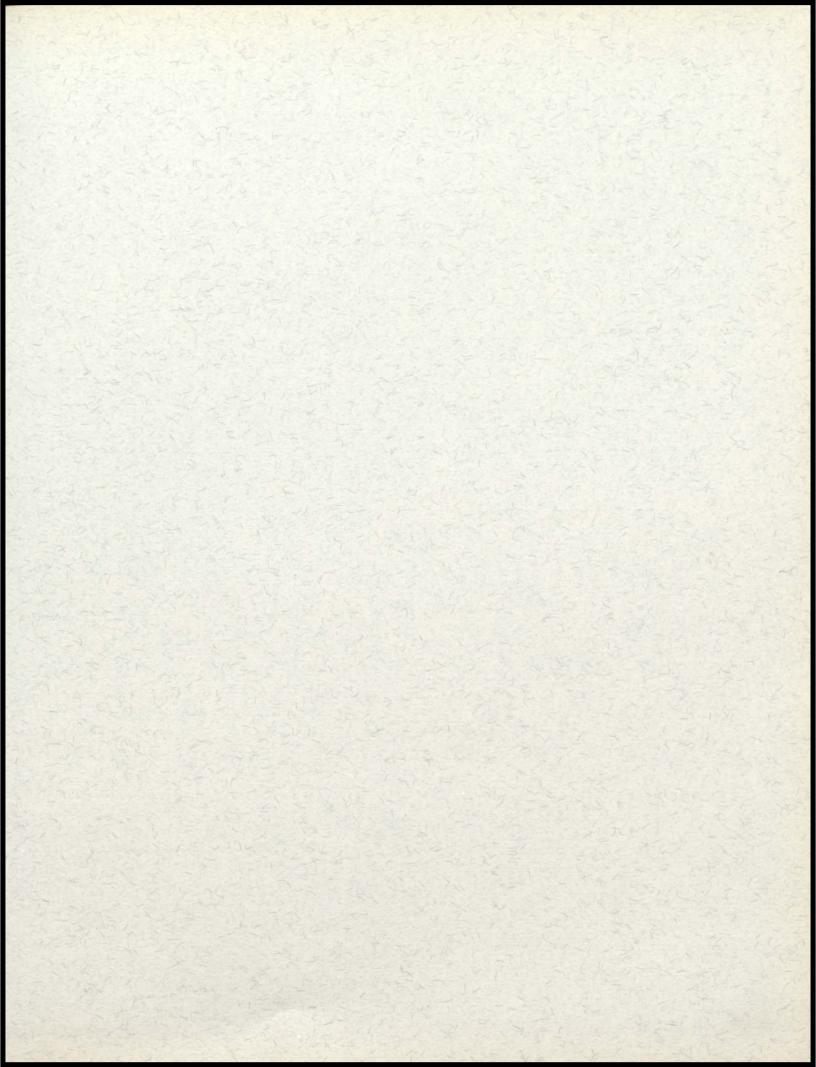

All year students, faculty, and staff put up with remodeling. New double rooms at the northwest corner of the school started off without curtains to separate them so classes of Freshman English got to chew out Junior English classes for being loud and annoying, and vice versa. The heat didn't work, the science classes had no sinks, no table, no chairs...

Yearbook (and the LARUS) managed without a darkroom until late April. Trofitter let us stay late in the computer room (first it was in the new/old Annexfrom Broadway, then it moved into the new computer lab that was most recently the office and before that Escola's room). Then he kicked us out and we've been fighting over this very computer for the past three hours.

The worst changes were the things that actually went wrong. The laserprinter died. The yearbook computer with the portrait monitor made some ominous squeaking noises. Not every student at SHS is pictured in the yearbook. We feel badly about that. (Feel bad?)

We'll miss the people who won't be coming back next year: the class of '94... perhaps a favorite staff member.

Things changed in the world and in the nation and right here at home. This book will be the same when you come back to it in twenty years.—Jan Priddy, Michelle Gribble, and Kris Powell

The 1994 SEABREEZE was printed with Craftline Embrossed cover in Nighthawk 499, Whirlpool grain, silver foil 381 cover design, and purple 375 on the spine. Endsheets are cotton wood with navy 540 in the front and back. Base ink was black on glossy 80 # 191 stock, with nine plus signatures. Body copy was Times in 10pt. Captions were Helvetica set in 8pt. Headlines were all Times set up with Smart Art fitted text. Most senior portraits and all underclass portraits were done by professional photographers in the area. Black and white photography was shot and processed by the SEABREEZE staff (with a borrowed darkroom). Many black and white photos were taken in color by the SEABREEZE staff and processed by Costco. Photos were taken using student owned equipment, SHS Minoltas, and a new Pentax Zoom60X.

Copy was written on Macintosh computers, set up on the SEABREEZE Macintosh computers using Microsoft Word for word processing, Aldus PageMaker for layout, and printing on an Apple Laser Writer II.

SEABREEZE is entirely student generated and submitted to the plant camera-ready.
